

SEEKING INSTRUCTOR FOR UNDERGRADUATE COURSE ON THINKING, JUDGMENT & DECISION MAKING
STARTING SPRING 2018

DEPT OF PSYCHOLOGY, BOSTON COLLEGE

The Psychology Department at Boston College is seeking an instructor for an undergraduate course on thinking, judgment, and decision making. The course would include non-psychology majors and first year students. The course would take a non-neuroscience perspective, and would cover major theories and findings from a cognitive science perspective. The course could touch on applications in behavioral economics and politics, but the focus would be psychology.

This class would be taught in the spring semester. Beginning pay would be $6,355. We plan to offer this course once a year.

Interested applicants should send a cv, contact information for 2 references, and a brief letter of introduction outlining the kind of course that the applicant could teach.

Send to Ellen Winner at winner@bc.edu.